

“Food Crisis, Global Health and Social Innovation”

Poverty remains an alarming social issue across Asia, despite the region's remarkable economic growth. Food shortage, malnutrition and their attendant health issues, in particular are factors preventing the poorer strata of society from improving their livelihood. The situation is a grave human security challenge and warrants urgent attention. It is in the interest of Japan's human security and global health policy to engage in resolving this critical issue.

Saturday 10 December, 16:30-18:00
Room 404, Osaka University Nakanoshima Center

This second lecture in the Social Innovation Lecture Series will invite Keokam Kraisoraphong of Chulalongkorn University, who is also the editor of World Food Policy journal, Jeff Shen, CEO of China's Leping Social Entrepreneur Foundation and Fan Li, director of Global Links Initiative to share their views and concerns on the situation with other researchers and students engaged or interested in this important topic.

INFORMATION: Yasutaka Saeki, The Inamori Foundation course (06)-6850-5995
Haruko Satoh, Center for Global Initiatives (06)-6850-5994