

Workshop

Political Killings: modes of repression and transitional justice

Feb. 12, Tue., 10:00-16:30
Conference Room, 6F, OSIPP, Osaka Univ.

The workshop examines three cases of political killings from the cold war period in a comparative perspective with particular foci on modes of repression and transitional justice. In all cases, the military was the primary machine of repression and the operation to annihilate the enemy was thorough in its intension. But the processes of transitional justice in three countries vary in scope and depth depending on power relations in post-dictatorship politics. The workshop analyzes factors behind the differences and discusses challenges ahead in transitional justice.

Program

Opening 10:00-10:10

■ Session 1: Korea 10:10-11:50

Mr. Jinwoo Park, Director, Reserach Division, May 18 Memorial Foundation

"The May 18 Democratic Uprising and Transitional Justice"

Comments: Prof. Kwansoo Yang, Guest Professor, Osaka University of Economics and Law

■ Session 2: Indonesia 13:00-14:30

Dr. Sri Wahyuningroem, Lecturer, Universitas Pembangunan Nasional Veteran Jakarta

"Where to Now? In Search of Justice in the Post-Transitional Justice of Indonesia"

Comments: Dr. Dianto Bachriadi, Visiting Professor, Center for Southeast Asian Studies, Kyoto University

■ Session 3: Argentina 15:00-16:30

Prof. Gabriela Aguila, Professor, National University of Rosario

"Repression in Argentina during the 70s: state violence and processes of justice"

Comments: Dr. Chie Ishida, Assistant Professor, Waseda University

■ For inquiry, contact the organizer:

Akihisa Matsuno, OSIPP, Osaka University

Email: matsuno@osipp.osaka-u.ac.jp

[Kaken Research Project: A Structural Analysis of Politicide - essentialization and "intent" to destroy]

May 18 Memorial Park, Gwangju, Korea

Taman 65, Bali, Indonesia

Espacio Memoria y Derechos Humanos, Argentina

Photos by A. Matsuno